HARD FOUGHT BLAZE

FIRE THAT THREATENED THE BUSINESS QUARTER.

Conflagration Starts in Warehouse of Hawaiian Hardware Company—General Alarm Sounded to Subdue Flames

One of the hardest fights in the history of the Honolulu Fire Department was experienced Saturday afternoon, when a fire broke out in the middle of the Hawaiian Hardware Company's warehouse. For two hours the whole block bounded by Merchant and Queen, Fort and Kaahumanu streets, was in danger. The fire could not be located nor approached on account of the dense volumes of smoke, and it slowly ate its way along the ceilings, between walls and among the heaps of stores in the warehouse. The firemen kept it under control, but could not suppress it till late in the afternoon.

The fire is said to have been caused by an accident with gasoline in the warehouse. An order for gasoline for Young Bros. launch had been received and was being filled. The Hardware Company promptly moved all explosives out of its store when the fire began to spread, but there was some turbulence in the warehouse, which probably helped the flames.

The first alarm was turned in at about 2:15. The fire was in the center of the Campbell block, and very hard to reach. Hose was sent in from the Martin tailor shop, out of which everything was moved early, and from behind the building the firemen approached with more hose. The difficulty of getting at the flames gave them a chance to spread, and soon dense clouds of smoke were filling the building. There were no flames to be seen, and only now and then were the firemen able to get a glimpse of fire. They turned streams into the burning warehouse from every possible direction.

Chief Thurston sent in a general alarm soon after three o'clock. The amount of water then turned in upon the warehouse was enormous. The Campbell building was literally soaked. The floors up stairs had an inch or more of standing water in them much of the time. It ran down the stairs in a small series of waterfalls. But the fire was all the time creeping along the ceiling of the warehouse and up between the walls of the building, where no stream could reach.

From the roof of the building one stream was poured down on the hidden fire. Another came from the court behind the hardware company's store. A hose running through the store occupied by J. W. Redhouse, the Inter-Island Telegraph Company and others, sent a heavy column of water through the shutters of the warehouse at that point, and upstairs there was a stream through a hole chopped in the floor.

At several points the firemen struck to their posts with the greatest difficulty. Upstairs the Campbell block was so filled with smoke that none but firemen remained. The latter stuck close to a large hole that had been chopped in the floor and poured a steady stream on to the goods in the warehouse. No fire could be seen during most of the time, but hot smoke came up through the floor in a dense column, and kept those who had offices from saving their property at this point.

There was a general moving out of the building when the fire began to threaten large destruction. J. S. Martin, the tailor, was one of the first to move, and he got everything out. His store was flooded and he would have lost practically everything if he had not moved. The Wireless Telegraph Company moved its belongings out next door, and J. W. Redhouse saved his instruments.

David Lawrence began to move too late, and suffered considerable loss. The greater portion of his stock was saved, however. Quantities of cigarettes and tobacco were dropped on the street and soaked by the fire streams. The expensive fixtures inside the store were damaged to some extent, though the fire did not reach the store. The Hawaiian Hardware Company did not move out, but got rid of some gunpowder.

Upstairs in the Campbell block there was great activity in moving. The building was full of offices. Desks, bookcases, books, typewriters and even safes, were moved down the narrow stairway with great rapidity. J. M. Monsarrat saved a large quantity of office fixtures. He had quite a force of helpers, among whom was Attorney Magoon, who made a record as a furniture mover. Fred Harrison moved out when smoke began to fill his office. K. Kobayashi, M. D. Monsarrat, Hinds, Rolph & Company and Achi and Johnson moved out as quickly as possible, but their offices were not burned out. The smoke and water would have done great damage, however.

The smoke filled Q. H. Berry's office so quickly that moving out was impossible. It was impossible to reach the office at all for some time, and when the passage through the smoke was made, floods of papers, some of them valuable records, were floating about the floor. The office of John Efinger and F. R. Strauch suffered in the same way.

F. W. Hankey did not move out, and suffered no damage. He had a valuable law library and a force of men were on hand ready to turn to and move it if the fire made further progress.

The fire was finally suppressed by streams from the upper floor of the block. It was between the floors. A second stream was taken up and another hole cut through the floor and by six o'clock the engines were able to go home leaving only to play a stream on the smoldering timbers.

The loss will probably reach $50,000. The Hardware company had about $75,000 worth of stock in its warehouse, and the entire stock was soaked with water. A large part of it was partially burned. A look into the warehouse today showed black charred goods of all kinds, and never was there a stock of goods more thoroughly drenched. Tons upon tons of water poured through the building for three hours.

In addition to the damage to the hardware stock, the building is much damaged. The rafters are charred and many of them burned through. A large part of the building will have to be rebuilt. The office part of the Campbell block suffered considerably from water, and there was damage to the office fixtures of most of the tenants.

Most of the losses are covered by insurance. It is considered very fortunate that such a fire did not break out at night, as there would have been a very good chance that the whole block would have gone. As it was the Fire Department had its hands full for a couple of hours. There was not much of a spectacle for the large crowd that gathered on the scene, as the fire was hidden, but many of the firemen are suffering with their eyes and lungs today on account of their battle with smoke.

ADVERTISING.

"To stop advertising in this age is equivalent to taking the telephone out of your business—you have no way of telling the people about the goods you have and consequently you don't get the trade. Nor does the other fellow get it—there is no trade. People simply do with less to eat. Advertising educates them to buy the best and to insist upon having advertised goods. If they are not educated thus, they get along on staples, and mighty few of them. Advertising is educating the public continually and each new advertiser finds a more intelligent, responsive audience to hear his argument. Ads educate — pocketbook everywhere at all times."—Alfred G. Bauer.
